

13 INJURED IN AUTO CRASHES NEAR MARION

Condition of Several Accident Victims Believed To Be Serious

9 CARS INVOLVED

Local Residents Included in List of Those Hurt in Four Traffic Mishaps

Thirteen persons were injured in automobile mishaps in the vicinity of Marion during the weekend. While none of the injuries were fatal several may be serious.

Four accidents, involving nine automobiles, were responsible for the injuries.

Mr. A. J. Seckel, 245 North State street, was seriously injured and his wife, Mrs. Mary Louise Seckel, 15, and Charles Seckel, 12, sustained serious injuries when the Dodge coupe in which they were riding skidded into a ditch about a mile this side of Caledonia during the heavy rainstorm early this morning.

Mr. Seckel and his daughter were taken to the City hospital in the U. S. ambulance. Condition of the injuries sustained by the Seckels was not determined.

Mr. Seckel's condition is believed to be serious. The fact that she was thrown from the car has made a careful examination of her injuries imperative. Dr. A. A. Starnes, attending physician, said today. She suffered severe scalp and facial wounds, a leg wound and possible internal injuries.

Mr. Seckel is suffering from fractures in his right knee and thigh and from a laceration in his left eye.
Charles Seckel escaped with a scalp wound. The other two occupants of the car, a sister and brother of A. J.
Seckel, Mrs. Charles Seckel, of Cleveland, and Carl Seckel, of Caledonia, sustained only slight injuries. Mrs.
Seckel received cuts and bruises as she was thrown from the car. Carl Seckel, who was driving, sustained cuts and bruises
on his head and face.

Car Skids
The accident occurred when the Seckels skidded and left the road, slipping into the ditch just this side of the Caledonia bridge on the Columbus road. Mrs. Seckel was thrown from the car into a pool of mud and water. The party was enroute to Caledonia.

Two persons were injured when the automobile in which Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gard and their two children, John

HEAT IS FATAL TO RAILWAY EMPLOYEE

H. B. Schroyer Victim of Torrid Wave Which Sweeps Marion and Vicinity

Heat is listed as the toll of the torrid wave which held Marion and vicinity in its grip during the last few days.

In death was that of Harry B.
Schroyer, Pennsylvania, railway passenger conductor, who was found dead in his rooming house in Crestline, Monday morning. The Crawford family, of Crestline, decided that Schroyer succumbed to indigestion caused by the torrid heat.

Schroyer was a resident of Ft.
Wayne, Ind., where his body was taken for burial.

Yesterday's rain brought temperatures down from the torrid weather, but the mercury here, down to 63
last night, the city is due for another heat wave, according to today's official forecast, which reads: "Partly cloudy tomorrow, Tuesday fair with rising temperatures."

Yesterday's high temperature in Marion was 86, nine degrees above the same date a year ago. In 1927 on the same date the mercury fell to 77 during the day to 33 at night.
Yesterday's rainfall here totalled 1.57 inches. At noon today the official temperature reading in Marion was 78

Polish Fliers Resting in Portugal Preparatory To Return To Paris Tuesday

Transatlantic Aviators Forced Down After Remaining in Air for 36 Hours; Rescued by German Steamer 80 Miles from Land; One Hurt Boarding Ship

Oporto, Portugal, Aug. 6.—The Polish fliers, Majors Louis Idzikowski and Casimir Kubala, rested here today preparatory to returning to Paris whence they started out at 12:19 a. m.
(New York daylight time) Friday with high hopes of spanning the Atlantic only to be forced to land on the ocean
36 hours later, 80 miles south of Cape Finisterre, Spain.

Within less than an hour's flying of land the fliers were forced down by a break in a fuel tank. In landing, their plane, the "Maradek Pilsudski," was badly damaged, its wings breaking, but it remained afloat. Idzikowski and Kubala leaped into the sea and swam about until picked up by the German steamer Samos which sighted the plane almost immediately.

While boarding the Samos, Kubala slipped and fell, breaking his spectacles and injuring his right forearm.
He was treated at a hospital here after the Samos had brought both fliers to Leixoes, a little port town near here.
The Samos also towed in the remains of the plane.

Tomorrow the aviators will return to Paris. Except for Kubala's slight injuries, they were none the worse for their near escape from death.

Sighted by Ship
The fliers were sighted by ships three times on Friday during their flight. The first time they were sighted at 4:10 a. m. (New York daylight) of France, flying steadily on the projected course which was to have taken them over the Azores route.

About two and a half hours later,
the British steamship Amakura sighted their plane still further northeast of the Azores, indicating that they were heading back for the European mainland. From then on until their forced landing at 12:45 p. m. (New York daylight time) Saturday, the plane was unsighted.

Continued absence of reports of their whereabouts had resulted in fears for the safety of the fliers. It is not known whether they intentionally headed back for Europe because of mechanical trouble or lost their direction and decided to return after finding themselves off their course.

It is believed the Polish aviators traveled sufficient distance to bring them about the entire way across the Atlantic if they had followed a true course.
Their plane was the second flight in a week to come to grief because of a broken fuel pipe. Like Capt. Frank T.
Courtney and his three companions, they were saved from a grim fate by the timely appearance of a steamship.

THREE KILLED WHEN TRAIN HITS MACHINE

Driver of Automobile in Critical Condition; Drove into Path of Engine

Havenna, Aug. 6.—Three persons are dead and a fourth is reported in critical condition at a hospital here today as the result of a grade crossing crash yesterday.

The dead are: Mrs. A. A. Stout, 60, of Mogadore, near Akron, and her granddaughters, Geraldine Stout, 7, and Marjorie Stout, 14, A. A. Stout, 62, driver of the automobile and grand father of the two children is in a hospital.

The tragedy occurred at a crossing north of here. The party had been visiting with another sister of the two little girls at a camp. Mr. Stout, who was driving the machine, said he became aware of the approach of the train as he neared the crossing and determined to put the car in reverse.
Accustomed to an automobile of a different gear shift, he drove it forward instead, and directly into the path of the locomotive.

Mrs. Stout and the two children were killed instantly, their bodies thrown to different places near the tracks. The parents of the two little girls are mourning in Michigan. They were reached last night and informed of the tragedy.

ing crushed stone. Both of his pelvic bones were broken in the accident. He also sustained other injuries.

Case hospital, Delaware, and later to the Mt. Carmel hospital, where his recovery was reported as doubtful by attending physicians this afternoon.

Volume of Orders for Future Delivery Largest in History of Local Industry

OVER 1,900 WORKING

Present Force Almost as Large as During War Period. Of-cial States

Orders now on file for future delivery of the products of the Marion Steam Shovel Co. are greater than at any time in the history of the company,
J. L. Ackerson, president, stated today.
There are sufficient orders now on hand to keep the plant working on a substantial production basis until well into next year, according to Mr.
Ackerson.

In discussing prospects for the future
Mr. Ackerson would make no comment other than that he could see no reason why present conditions should not continue into the near future, at least.

Largest Working Force Concurrent with the increase in orders the number of employees of the company has also been increased. At present the company is employing between 1,900 and 2,000 men. Mr. Ackerson stated. This is approximately three times the number on the payroll a year ago and is only a few men short of the number employed during the World war.

The increase in the number of employees at the plant has been gradual.
After reaching a low point during July and August of 1927, the number has been gradually increased since last November.

Trying New System
Among other changes introduced by the new management which took control of the plant more than a year ago is a bonus system.

The system, which has recently been introduced, is being given a trial in a number of departments and will later be extended to others, according to Mr.
Ackerson.

While the bonus system does not place employees on a piece work basis it does reward them for turning out more than the average amount of work.

LOS ANGELES WOMAN SLAIN; MAN IS HELD

Victim's Nude Body Beaten and Mutilated, Found by Husband

Los Angeles, Aug. 6.—Leo P. Kelly, 29, employed in a local meat market, was under arrest today in connection with the fiendish slaying of Mrs.
Myrtle L. Mellus, prominent Los Angeles society and clubwoman.

The victim's nude body was found in a public South Hollywood hotel, home late yesterday by her husband, Frank Mellus, wealthy business man, upon his return home from a fishing trip.

Less than an hour after Mrs. Mellus body was found, Kelly, the suspected killer, was captured in a clothes closet in the Mellus home. He is being held at Wilshire police station under heavy guard as a precaution against mob violence.

Weekend Finds Body
Mellus, who is vice president of a large sporting goods company and famous as a transatlantic champion, discovered the nude body of his wife sprawled across a bed in an upstairs sleeping room. The body was bruised and battered. Portions of it had been mutilated in the fiendish attack.

Kelly, though his clothing was stained with blood, refused to admit the crime. To questioning detectives, however, the accused man declared he had spent the day at the Mellus home and had given Mrs. Mellus a "terrible beating."

Then, detectives said, Kelly attempted to bargain with them.
"I loved that woman," he was quoted as saying. "If you let me go I will give you $10,000. But don't let the public know I loved her."

he had loved her.

Willard Possessed Ring's Greatest Punch But Feared To Use It

BY FRANK G. MENNE
WHENEVER a thought drifts along to Jess Willard, the comment is made: "If he had been vicious by nature—he had possessed only half the reason for Dempsey."
But he didn't.
And so he passed from the heights in his second defense of the title, after four years of reign, and slipped into certain forgetfulness, instead of remaining an unbeatable champion.
No man ever held the crown who had the mighty strength of Willard; none could hit with such murderous force. Yet Willard, giant that he was, gentle-like in the power that was his, rarely now in memory as a tapper and a slapper.
Along in 1922 when he was making his comeback and was tuning up for a fight with Floyd Johnson, I asked him—"Why don't you let loose with your punches?"
Willard looked calmly at me for a full minute. Then slowly, he answered: "BECAUSE—well—I guess I'm a little afraid."
And that perhaps was the truth, the whole truth and nothing else.
Willard knew his strength and his power; knew it and yet had feared it from the night nearly 10 years before when he had unleashed an uppercut, caught "Bull" Young under the chin, and a few minutes after they counted out Young, he went into a coma—and died.
Willard never was the same afterward. His career began in 1911. He bowed over men with ease and regularity in that year. It rarely was necessary for him to use his right hand. He jabbed with such crushing power that a few stabs in another man's face staggered him and another jab or two, or a tapping right cross finished him.
His career began in 1911. He bowed over men with ease and regularity in that year. It rarely was necessary for him to use his right hand. He jabbed with such crushing power that a few stabs in another man's face staggered him and another jab or two, or a tapping right cross finished him.

IN 1912 he knocked men right and left. And in 1912 he added to his string of kazo triumphs. Then came his fight with Young in August of that year. Willard expected an easy battle but Young was tough and rugged and those left jabs that staggered other men merely rattled off Young's face.
Things began to look bad for Willard—there was the likelihood that he might go down to a decision defeat. Faced by that possibility he waited patiently for the chance to deal forth the mightiest of his blows—the one that he feared himself.
It was a right hand uppercut.

The opening came—at last! Willard lunged forward a bit, swung that terrible long arm, the first went crashing under Young's chin, his head snapped upward, he toppled over—and that was his mortal end.
The death of "Bull" Young made Willard resolve to quit the ring. But he was coaxed back months later for a fight with Boer Rodol, as the fight was about to start, Jimmy Johnson, managing Rodol, went over to Willard and whispered:
"REMEMBER 'Bull' Young." Willard turned pale. Memory came back; fear of his own power overwhelmed him. And rather than risk a repetition of that Young tragedy he simply slumped and cuffed Rodol for ten rounds and let the Boer star the distance.

I saw Willard in most of his fights thereafter—and only twice did I see him swing with all his force the right hand that he never made a real try with it.
He feared it—feared the consequences if it struck.
So here was a man possessed of the most terrible blow in all ring history—one that could have won him an almost unending succession of victories, deliberately refusing to use it.

RICKARD STANDS TO LOSE POWER

Directors Reported Peaved at Man Who Lost $150,000 on Tunney-Heeney Fight; Several Other Members of Organization Rumored in Bad

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
New York, Aug. 4.—The Rickard, the man who established the record in connection with his Tunney-Heeney fight for giving until it hurt five miles away in Wall Street, is sitting now in the saddle at Madison Square Garden, according to steady whisperers on the backstairs today. The same directors who objected so strenuously when Rickard brought back only about $400,000 from a $2,000,000 gate at Chicago last year have Rickard under the gun now, they say, with more than a fair chance of shearing him of some of his power, large stockholder though he may be.
An almost continuous chain of failures, preceding by several months the Tunney-Heeney bout, are said to have been added to the indictment against Rickard's management. The main item in this alleged document, performance, is the $150,000 Rickard has admitted to losing on the recent heavyweight championship fight. Those in a position to know claim that Rickard has no means of computing his actual loss on this transaction.
Several members of his organization, including Jess McMahon, the matchmaker, and Col. John Hammond, in charge of hockey, also are declared to have incurred the wrath of some members of the directorate. In McMahon's case, there were rumors today that he might be supplanted by Leo F. Flynn. The latter once was matchmaker in everything but name at the old Garden further downtown.
There were the days when Rickard was fond to spend other men's money as might please his fancy, but those were the days, too, when success followed success and, naturally, those other men were disinclined to be too inquisitive. Besides, Wall Street had to be called in to float the New Garden bonds and Wall Street always wants to know what, when, why and how.

DEFENDING CHAMPION TURNS IN BEST SCORE TO LEAD FIELD OF 16

Opening Round Play To Be Completed by Wednesday

By KATH R. McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star
FIRST round of play for the championship of the Marion country club will get under way today to be completed by Wednesday. Sixteen golfers of the club finished the qualifying round yesterday.
H. W. Hane, defending champion of the title, led the field in qualifying play with a score of 84 for the 18 holes. J. J. Hane, K. M. Bower, J. M. Gardner and C. F. LaMarche trailed the leader with scores of 89. Robert Owens, 15-year-old holder of the second handicap tournament held this year, failed to come up to expectations finishing in third place with a score of 91.
All advance hope pointed to a victory for young Owens with H. W. Hane as a leading contender. Last season's champion played good golf finishing 10 strokes above the par of the course.
Pairings for the first round matches are as follows:
K. M. Bower vs. P. J. Longshore.

G. A. Wright vs. Dan Evans.
P. V. Murphy vs. J. M. Gardner.
T. W. Fairhurst vs. C. F. LaMarche.

"I WANTED TO KEEP MY SANITY"

Late portrait of Gene Tunney, who now reveals he quit the ring because of an incident during training for his second Dempsey fight. He was buffed over the left eye, then socked on the chin by sparring partner. For weeks he walked as in a haze, and it is one of the little ironies of the ring that Jack Dempsey "cured" him. That shower of lefts and rights to the jaw in the seventh round at Chicago did the work.

BUTLERS DROP SHORT GAME TO COLUMBUS LINDEN GOPHERS, 1-0

Rain Causes Contest Between Eagles and Keystone To Be Called ALLOWS ONE HIT

Lone Run Scored by Visitors in Second Inning of Fray

WHEN rain resulted in the contest being called off during the last half of the fifth inning, the Linden Gophers of Columbus held a one point lead over the Butler Bulldogs. Marion is a feature recreation ball game looked as a preliminary to the Marion Eagles contest.
The fray between the local aggregation and the Columbus Keystone was called off when a second deluge of water flooded the playing field.
The preliminary attraction brought over of the best teams of Columbus to Marion. At the end of four and a half innings the locals were trailing, 1 to 0. Columbus scored one run in the second inning.
While List was allowing but one hit to the local club, Jones gave but three Gopher batters a chance to reach first by means of bingles. Columbus rules, in which base stealing was permitted and the outbatter ball used, handicapped the Butler team quite a bit.
The summary for the contest follows:

CARDINALS BEAT GIANTS IN FIRST

New York Team Trailing Leaders by 6½ Games; Yankees Lose as Mackmen Move Nearer Slipping World's Champions; Browns Lose to Red Sox

New York, Aug. 4.—With a lead of 6½ games, the St. Louis Cardinals are firmly installed in the driver's seat in the National league sweepstakes today as the result of their 6 to 4 victory over the New York Giants in the first game of the important series between the two clubs here yesterday. The world's champion Yankees were beaten while the Athletics won, however, and New York's lead over Philadelphia in the American league race has been cut from 13½ to 3½ games in less than a month.
The Mackmen have rolled up an imposing record of 10 wins in their last 21 starts. The Yanks, with a shattered pitching staff, inferior catchers and a shaky infield, have won only five and lost nine. Yesterday young Ed Walsh of the White Sox beat the New Yorkers 5 to 4 while Lefty Grove was striking out 11 men and yielding only three hits in pitching the Athletics to a 5 to 1 triumph over Detroit.
While St. Louis is assured of leaving New York with a comfortable lead no matter what happens in the remaining games of the series, the Giants are still in the running. They have gained a game and a half on the league leaders in the present inter-sectional clashes, winning 11 out of 15 to nine out of 13 for St. Louis. And yesterday John McGraw uncovered a brilliant prospect in Carl Hubbell, $50,000 Texas southpaw who assured the New York manager that he could "throw a curve around a man's neck like a lasso."
Brooklyn's 5 to 2 win over Chicago marked Dazzy Vance's fourth straight triumph over the Cubs. He struck out seven men, raising his total for the season to 132.
Another neat exhibition of pitching was contributed by Charley Buff of the Red Sox. He held St. Louis to four hits and beat the Browns 3 to 1. Other teams did not play.

CLOCK FAST TIME IN SMALL MOTOR MEET

Lima Entry Takes First Place in Free-for-All Event

Buckeye Lake, Aug. 4.—Unusually fast time was recorded for the winners of the various events of the outdoor motor regatta held here yesterday afternoon. The regatta was conducted by the Central Ohio Outboard Motor club under the auspices of the Ohio State Outboard Motor association.
Baby Dart, the entry of I. J. Holler, Lima, took the feature free-for-all race. His boat was clocked at 14 minutes 21 seconds for the six mile course. W. E. Lyman, Cleveland, took second place and W. L. Black, Canal Fulton, third.
Huck Willard won the class B event with Ed Fisher and Nate Halliwell finishing second and third. Using the same boat with which he won the free-for-all, Holler showed his boat's stern to the field in win class C contest.
Class A event was won by Buster Willard, Buckeye Lake, over a mile course in six minutes 19 seconds. Willard also won the three-mile mile class.
Chuck Hunter, piloting the Baby Gar, rowboat race, owned by J. H. Heichenback, in a speed trial over a two and an eight mile course was clocked in three minutes and one-fifth seconds.
Commander John D. Robinson of the Cleveland yacht club, acted as presiding judge.

NATIONAL TOURNEY OPENING SET TODAY

Drewes Favored To Retain Tennis Title in Matches at Cleveland

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—A bunch of sun-bronzed young gentlemen play tennis just for fun were here today for the opening of the national public parks tennis tournament.
There are no club affiliations and no Davis cup players. These are the boys who drop around to the park in the evenings after work and wait their turns on the tennis courts.
But each is rated a champion or a near champion, in his own backyard. Each has won the distinction by meeting all comers. And from the ranks of the public park players may some day come a team which will bring the Davis cup back to America.
Drewes Picked To Win
Ted Drewes, 30-year-old St. Louis newspaperman, who has won the national public parks singles championship for the last four years, is favored to retain his title. Lester Stoenen, a 17-year-old Los Angeles boy, has more than a fighting chance, however, to put an end to Drewes' long reign, according to net experts who have watched the Californian in practice. John Metz, of Memphis, is regarded as another strong contender.
Drewes has never won a doubles championship. This year he is hoping to take his fifth straight singles title and come through in the doubles as well. His doubles partner is William Bascom, also of St. Louis.
After repeated rains yesterday, the courts at Rockefeller park, where the tournament is to be played, were soggy today, but every effort was being made to get them in condition for the start of the singles matches a 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.
A reception and formal introduction for the entrants was held this morning at Wade Park Manor and the draw for pairings was to be held immediately afterwards. The tournament is the most important tennis event ever held in Cleveland and is watched with much interest here.
Cities represented are: St. Louis, Minneapolis, Memphis, Los Angeles, Columbus, Lancaster, O., Philadelphia, Sharon, Scranton, Savannah, Baltimore, Poughkeepsie, Buffalo, Birmingham, Chicago, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Detroit, Cleveland, Washington, Cleveland Heights and Lakewood.

WHO'S WHO OF LOOP WILL BE DETERMINED

Lutheran-Epworth Junior Battle at Central Field Holds Limelight

Who's who in Sunday School league No. 2 may be determined tonight when four leading teams meet on two diamonds.
Holding the spotlight of interest is the fray between Lutheran and Epworth Juniors at Central. Epworth is tied with United Brethren for first place while Lutherans and Lee Street are jointly occupying the runner-up position.
Lee Street and United Brethren will tangle at Silk Mills in another of the all-important frays.
Placing the "if" into circulation again, Lutherans must beat Epworth while Lee Street trounces United Brethren to bring about a four way tie for first place. In case Lutherans and Lee Street lose, then Epworth and United Brethren will have to fight it out. If Lutheran should beat Epworth and United Brethren win, then the title will rest with the latter team.

American Trade Revives on Large Scale: Houses Flooded with Orders

General Motors and U. S. Steel Exhibit Strong Leadership

BY W. S. COUSINS
New York, Aug. 4.—Confident forwardness in the motor, oil, merchandise, and other representative securities, the industrial stocks market showed a good part of which was outside of Wall Street. High-powered pools and traders resumed their activity in the market, which led to a general advance. Coincident with this was the predominance of orders for a larger sale than in the past three years, the confidence of industrial stocks was evident in the market as it has been at the last two months.

greatly encouraged by the strong leadership exhibited by General Motors and U. S. Steel, both of which moved against the upward trend of the market last week. General Motors sold above 100 in the forenoon, against Saturday's close at 157 3/8 and U. S. Steel sold in good volume around 142. The oil and copper made a strong team, demand for representative stocks in both classes being stimulated by the higher current and prospective earnings made possible through the higher prices for crude and finished products. Maryland, Texas corporation, Standards of New York and New Jersey, Barnard and Sinclair led, the activity in the oil group.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Markets were quiet here today. Dealers were restocking after unusual heavy buying Saturday and prices were in the main unchanged from last week. Supplies of nearly all kinds of seasonable fruits and vegetables were available.

Sweet corn was plentiful. Dealers were receiving large supplies today that were selling at from 30 to 40 cents a dozen. Golden bantam corn was selling at five cents over the price of other kinds. Cheaper corn is looked for by dealers before the end of the week.

Homegrown potatoes were cheaper today. Dealers asking 25 cents for grade A stock. The supply is large, although no immediate price change is looked for by dealers. Homegrown tomatoes continue to sell at 10 cents a pound, an advance of four cents over the price of early last week. California head lettuce is holding at 20 cents. A small supply of endive was being carried by dealers and was selling at 25 cents a pound.

Blackberries are expected to reach the peak of the season this week. Good quality were selling today at 15 cents a quart or two quarts for 35 cents. Whether or not there will be a further drop in price as the supply becomes heavier this week dealers were unable to predict. Georgia peaches are supplying a large demand at from $1.50 to $2.25 a bushel.

Watermelons continue plentiful and were selling today at from 40 to 55 cents each. The demand is large and the quality unusually good, dealers say. GOOD ROADS GROUP AGAINST TAG SLASH Federation Takes Issue with Auto Clubs Over Proposed $1 Licenses.

Columbus, Aug. 3—The Ohio Good Roads federation today took issue against the Ohio State Automobile association and its club members who favor a restitution of the automobile license fee to a flat rate of $1.

A questionnaire was recently sent out by the Ohio State Automobile association in part is as follows:
"Due to the fact that the gasoline tax provides revenue sufficient and more to meet all of the requirements for which it is intended, the state organization and its member clubs favor a reduction of the automobile license fee to a flat rate of $1, and on this feature they desire to know where those opposed to represent the public office stand."

The Ohio Good Roads federation, a public welfare organization, replied in saying that the present gasoline tax and other revenue for road purposes do not provide sufficient funds to maintain and repair and to construct the roads in Ohio essential to the needs and well-being of our citizens.

Two years ago federal and state engineers made a complete survey of the state system of roads in Ohio. The federation has taken this report and has brought it down to date. It maps out a five-year program for construction and repair work.

The federation contends that the failure of the state to carry out his work will cause it to slip into a minor position among our sister states. If this work is to be done it will require more money than the state has available for road purposes.

Instead of permitting a reduction in the motor license fee the federation believes it should require an additional

LID CLAMPED DOWN

Marion Ferry Good Sunday Town as Closing is Enforced

Marion Ferry, Aug. 6—Yesterday, the hottest Sunday in the year, found Marion Ferry with a partial enforcement of blue laws which closed confectioneries, shoe and stand and groceries. Only news stands, drug stores and restaurants were permitted to be open and allowed to sell papers, drugs and food only.

Mayor Howard Duff had decreed that the blue laws were to be enforced and apparently succeeded in his ultimatum. The drive was first directed at Sunday theater openings, with more than a score of arrests on the past two Sundays. Theaterowners threatened to have every other business opened on Sunday closed unless they were allowed to operate, with the result that the lid was clamped on here.

But one arrest was reported for violation of the blue law yesterday.

Plans To Settle Down to Work on Final Draft of Speech

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 6—Gov. Al Smith returned to the executive mansion shortly before 1 o'clock this morning after an absence of nine days. After disposing of some state business the governor plans to settle down to work on the final draft of the speech he will deliver on the steps of the state capital on Aug. 22, when he formally accepts the presidential nomination.

During the latter part of the week the governor expects to confer with U. S. Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, and possibly one or two farm leaders from the middle west.

George N. Peck of Moline, Ill., spokesman for a million farmers of the middle west, who last week announced he would support the Democratic ticket because of Smith's stand on farm relief, is expected at the capital within the next 10 days. It is understood the governor desires to have another talk with Peck before he finishes that part of his acceptance speech in which he will deal with the farm problem.

In a heavy rain and electrical storm, the governor motored during the night from the state guard camp at Peckskill to the executive mansion. While crossing the Bear Mountain bridge the governor's car scraped tandem with a machine operated by a woman.

FOOTBALL STAR DIES IN RESCUE ATTEMPT

Witnesses Describe Gallantry of Notre Dame Star at San Diego Beach

San Diego, Aug. 6.—Max Hauser, 28, halfback on the 1924 Notre Dame football team, died here as he had lived, a hero.

Today, with the body of the former gridiron idol awaiting burial in a local mortuary, witnesses told how Hauser, unable to swim a stroke, had gone gallantly and unhesitatingly to his death in an effort to rescue his sweetheart, Virginia Moynahan, from drowning.

The tragedy occurred yesterday at Mission Beach, where Hauser and his fiancée, together with four friends, had gone for an outing.

Swamped By Comber
They were playing handball in the water when a great comber suddenly caught them and hurled them below the waves.

Hauser regained his feet to find Miss Moynahan struggling feebly and being carried out to sea in the undertow. Unhesitatingly, he plunged after her, but in a few strokes his strength gave out. He was drowned before aid could reach him.

Miss Moynahan was rescued by life guards after a terrific struggle. She was unconscious. Two other members of the party, Earl Ireland and Miss Franciska Croxall, were also dragged from the water and revived after a thirty-minute fight.

Worked Over For An Hour
But nothing could be done for the football hero. At the end of an hour and half of work, physicians and first aid workers declared he was beyond their help.

Funeral services for Hauser were to be held at 3 o'clock today. The inquest will follow the funeral. The body will be taken back to Mt. Vernon, Wash., for burial.

Hauser was football coach at the University of Redlands in 1925 and more recently had been acting as assistant physical instructor at the Pacific Beach Army and Navy Academy.

BOMB EXPLODED
Before Home of Chicago Negro, Primary Inquiry Witness

Chicago, Aug. 6.—A bomb was exploded before the home of William Wood, blind political leader, early Sunday in what was believed to be the first violent attempt to intimidate a special grand jury witness.

Wood, known as the "Blind Wizard" in Southside politics, testified before the special grand jury investigating April primary disorders.

Howard Reddy, defeated candidate for Fourteenth Ward Commissioner in the primary, was named by Wood, but denied knowledge of the affair.

OFFICIALS SEIZED

Greeks Are Held for Ransom—Death Threatened

Athens, Greece, Aug. 6.—Former Under-Secretary of Finance Melas and Constantino Melas, former deputy from Janina, have been captured by brigands in Western Macedonia, where they and Premier Eleutherios Venizelos have been campaigning for the elections. The band that carried them off has demanded ransom of 5,000,000 drachmas (about $64,000), or double that amount if the kidnapping is brought to the notice of a subordinate.

The brigands threatened to kill their prisoners if they are pursued by military forces. The two men were seized at Kapsali, about 10 kilometers from Janina.

A PROPHECY

WHEN James T. Beeg—"Jim," he likes to be called—comes to Marion the other day in the interest of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor, he told Rotarians and Kiwanians a story that may see the prediction upon which it is founded come true within the next few weeks.

Beeg admits that he didn't think he would be returned to congress. A lot of others thought the same way. In the language of the flapper, it was just going to be too bad.

But, the unusual happened and Beeg was one of the few Ohio Republicans that went back to congress. He went back with a big majority over his Democratic opponents.

After the November election President Harding called Jim Beeg to the White House. Harding congratulated Beeg of his victory.

"Beeg," he said, "you are going to be the Republican candidate for governor of Ohio in 1924."

And, then Harding died the following year. Beeg continued in his congressional chair. Now, six years later, "Jim" Beeg is a candidate for governor with what is regarded as an excellent chance to take the nomination. But according to the Beeg campaign cards, if nominated he will be elected.

COUNTY LOSES PEN

THE well-known absent-minded professor who often is made the goal in wisecracker's gags has nothing on the proprietor of a second hand store in Marion.

The merchant was visiting an office in the courthouse a few days ago, and had occasion to use a penholder on the desk of the official whom he was visiting. Instead of returning the pen to the rack after finishing with it, he absent-mindedly stuck it in his pocket.

As the caller left the office a penholder, with the pen point up, was reposing with pencils in the breast pocket of his coat.

CAUGHT IN TRAFFIC

THOSE who insist that auto worms noticed on sidewalks after a heavy rain come down with the rain drops would have a hard time explaining the presence of a fair-sized "snapping" turtle on South Main street near the Elite apartment one day last week.

When last seen the turtle was slowly ambling across the street, entirely unmindful of the buzz of traffic around him.

City life of the "snapper" was rudely cut short when a passing motorist stopped his car and made him captive.

New Yorkers Seek Refuge from Heat at Beach

New York, Aug. 6.—A million New Yorkers sought refuge from the heat yesterday at Coney Island, the record crowd taxing the bathing and other facilities of the resort beyond capacity.

Police estimated that 500,000 persons went into the surf while other thousands stormed the crowded bath houses in a futile attempt to obtain accommodations. At the Coney Island police station 350 lost children were turned in.

STONE CONFIDENT

Feels Sure He'll Lead New Show to the Road Next Season

New York, Aug. 6.—While surgeons give Fred Stone only an even chance to return to the stage, the comedian is confident that he will leave Lawrence hospital in New London, with health restored, to lead his new show to the road next season.

Reports received from the hospital today indicated that the dying dancer was progressing slowly, but certainly, toward recovery.

At least a month must pass before the specialists can determine whether the broken bones will knit solidly enough for the 35-year-old player to tread the boards again.

America's Track and Field Team Again Victor By Wide Margin

OLYMPIC ATHLETES SCORE 173 POINTS

U. S. Swimmers Win and Lose in Aquatic Events

NEW YORK GIRL FIRST

Record for 200-Metre Breast Stroke Twice Lowered in Heats

August 4.—The United States Olympic track and field team again emerged victor by a wide margin in the starting upsets in the first round of the past week of competition.

In the men's competition American athletes scored a total of 173 points, while the runner-up, took five points and 102 points.

In the women's events, with the United States scoring a total of 104 points, the United States and Germany took one first place, and Germany 25 points and Germany 25 points.

The American team came through in the final track and field events yesterday to win the gold medal and 1,600 meter race, while the world's record in the 100 meter race was bettered in the second round.

Ray Takes Fifth
The American hope in the 100 meter race, the American, could do no better than fifth place in the race. El Quafi, an Egyptian who was not figured in the first round, won the race with first place in the 100 meter race, and the American, also sprang a surprise in second only 130 meters in the Algerian.

The American swimmers won and lost in the Olympic games today, Miss Mary Norelius, New York, romping off with the 400-metre final for women with Josephine McKim, Homestead, Pa., in third place while Arne Borg, Sweden, took the men's 1,500-metre race in a new Olympic record of 19:51.45.

The best the Americans, Clarence Crabbe, Honolulu, and Ray Ruddy, New York could do against Borg's performance was third and fourth respectively. The old record holder, "Boy" Charlton, Australia, was second, about 10 metres behind the winner. Crabbe was a full length of the tank or 50 metres, back of Borg and in turn beat off his countryman, Ruddy, by a length of the pool.

As a consequence of Borg's victory was, Miss Norelius made her even more so. She led from the very outset, thrashing a trail so keen that no other miss in the field had the temerity to follow it except at a respectful distance. Miss McKim remained in second place nearly all the way, closely followed by Miss Braun, of Holland. The latter waited until the final 50 metres to flash her bid for the place. The Holland's sprint was too much for the tiring girl from Homestead, who fell back into third place and was four feet behind Miss Braun at the end.

The stadium was in an uproar as Miss Norelius finished the race and pulled herself blithely out of the tank, apparently unworried by her record effort. The American fans set up a great clamor over the performance and, raising the radiant girl on their shoulders, paraded with her to the competitors' exit. Like the triumphant athletes of old, she was presented with three bouquets of flowers as they carried her out. The remaining three races in the event went to Miss Stewart, England; Miss Vanderzorg, South Africa, and Miss Tanner, England, finishing in that order.

A blazing sun beat down on the uncovered stands and made matters very uncomfortable for the capacity crowd. The latter, in the main, were more demonstrative over Borg's victory, Miss Norelius' acclaim coming largely from the American sections.

Borg, like the petite New York girl, never left his supremacy in the slightest doubt. He jumped into the lead at the start and never relinquished the pace, churning up a terrific foam with his thrashing arms and flashing feet. He was "crushed" by unofficial timers at 400 metres in 4:58, some 0.25 seconds better than Johnny Weissmuller's Olympic record for that distance. However, unofficial watches will be unofficial watches. The American won by three boat lengths, their time being 6:48 2-5 seconds against the Austrian's time of 6:55 3-5 seconds. This time was a record for the Stoten, Holland course.

The American led from the start, rowing at a steady stroke until they reached the 1,500 metre mark. At that point the Americans were nearly five boat lengths ahead.

German Wins
The Olympic record for the 200-meter breast stroke was twice lowered today in the elimination heats.

E. Rademacher, of Germany, flashed across the finish mark of the first heat in 2 minutes and 52 seconds, four seconds under the old mark established by R. Skelton of the United States. Rademacher also holds the world's record of 2 minutes and 45 seconds for the event.

Thomas Blankenhorn, of Oakland, Cal., trailed Rademacher by 10 yards but qualified for the semi-final. The Canadian, Aubin, was a poor third and failed to qualify.

In the next heat, Tsuruta, of Japan, again lowered the Olympic record by swimming the distance in 2 minutes and 50 seconds.

American Defeated
Hungary defeated the United States in the Olympic water polo contest this afternoon. The score was five to nothing.

The members of the American team follow:
Forwards: Sam Greller, Illinois A. C.; John Weismuller, Illinois A. C.; halfbacks: George Scroth, Olympic Club, California; full backs: George Mitchell, Olympic Club, California, R. J. Greenberg, Chicago Athletic Club; goal tender: Harry Daniels, Chicago Athletic Club.

Memorial Program Is Given for Former Marion Pastor at His Church on Herman st.; Survivor of Tragedy Has Prominent Part in Services

Eulogies and tributes to the late Rev. Frank P. George, who met his death in a tragic drowning incident in Sandusky Bay last Tuesday, made up the program of a memorial service yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Mills was also heard in a vocal solo, "The Last Mile of the Way" and the Rev. George Reep, of Green Springs, who narrowly escaped drowning at the same time Mr. George met his death, gave a detailed account of the incident and sang as a special number, "While the Years Roll On."

Word has been received of improvement in the condition of the Rev. E. J. Haldeman, of Toledo, third minister in the accident. Mr. Haldeman had sufficiently recovered from the effects of his experience yesterday to attend church.

Tragic Happening
The late Mr. George, Mr. Reep and Mr. Haldeman were principals in one of the most tragic drownings on record in Ohio this year. They were on a fishing trip in Sandusky Bay when the rough waters which preceded a sudden storm overtook their boat, forcing them to remain in the water some 12 hours before help came. It was during that time that Mr. George met his death. Efforts of his companions to retain his body were futile. The body was recovered by a tug crew Friday and brought to Marion early Saturday. Burial was at Basil, O., Saturday afternoon.

The eulogies were made in the addresses of the Rev. A. B. Cox and the Rev. E. J. Haldeman.

just as the New Orleans limited was passing. The New Orleans train engine and 10 cars were derailed, officials said.

The derailed cars of the New Orleans limited crashed into the side of the cars of the Chickasaw limited, which was standing on the tracks at the spot. Seven of the Chickasaw's cars were knocked off the track.

TELEPHONE CRASH
Passengers Dig Into Wreckage for Lifelines

Cairo, Ill., Aug. 6.—"There were two bumps and then pandemonium." This was the way Sam Millstein, dealer in ladies ready to wear at Jackson, Miss., described the wreck of two Illinois Central trains near Mounds, Ill., today. Millstein was enroute from Chicago to his home in Jackson.

"There was a terrific jolt," Millstein told International News Service. "The jolt woke me up, then there came another bump that almost knocked me out of the car."

"We all realized immediately that something terrible had happened. We rushed out of the car. Two cars immediately ahead of the one I was on had turned over."

"We started digging into the cars to take out the injured and dead. The screams of men and women injured could be heard on all sides, and we worked frantically."

"Before the wrecker came, we had taken a few of the dead out of the wreckage. There were a number of injured that we had pulled out of the wreckage, waiting to be taken to hospitals. These injured were put on the relief trains that came from Cairo and brought here."

"Those of us who were not injured, but merely badly shaken up, were brought here to be transferred to other trains."

"I believe there are several more dead under the cars, but it will be impossible to tell until the wreckers can lift them off the track."

MINER TAKES LIFE
New Lexington, Aug. 6.—Funeral arrangements were being made here today for Frank W. Tedlow, 45, coal operator and real estate broker of Crooksville, who committed suicide by shooting Saturday.

Tedlow was believed to have been brooding over his wife's death and went to one of his mines Saturday where he shot himself twice. The body was found later by miners.

ing fishing "in the morning." He said she invited him over for Sunday breakfast.

Kelly said he arrived at the Mellus home about 8 a. m., after the husband had left.

"I had several drinks after breakfast," he said. "And then I quarreled with her for drinking. I told her and didn't want her to drink. We had a fight and I gave her a terrible beating. But I did not kill her."

"I fell asleep, waking up about 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. I know I didn't kill her because she was still warm when I left her."

Kelly professed to know none of the details of the terrible death scene which must have extended over several hours in the hollow home.

In Love With Husband
Mrs. A. W. Enright, sister-in-law of Mrs. Mellus, declared Kelly's story was a miserable attempt to excuse the fiendish crime.

"I can't believe that Myrtle ever loved this man before," she said. "This must have been the work of a fiend. I cannot imagine Myrtle having any friend her husband did not know about."

"Myrtle was in love with Frank. She would not have done anything to deceive him. This murderer must have gained entrance by some subterfuge, and then struck her down as soon as he could shut the door. She could not have known him. She was too lovely a woman."

ACCUMULATED EVIDENCE
Mysterious Package of Clothing To Be Element in Case

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 6.—Shreds of evidence continued to accumulate today as police progressed steadily in their investigation into the murder of Barbara Mauger, pretty Philadelphia woman whose nude body was discovered in a north Hollywood canyon.

Monksville, Russell St. Clair Beitzel, said to have been the common-law husband of the slain girl, continued to maintain his innocence, while authorities labored on the gathering of testimony by which they hope to convict him of a first degree murder charge.

A mysterious package of clothing, which is expected to arrive here from Phoenix, Ariz., will be one of the principal elements in the case against Beitzel, the district attorney's office asserted.

The clothing, police allege, was worn by Miss Mauger on the day she was killed and tossed into the canyon.

It is charged that Beitzel shipped the clothing to a fictitious Phoenix address in order to make difficult the determination of the dead girl's identity.

Investigating authorities further charged that the accused man went to the spot where the body was later found, a week after the murder. To support this allegation, the officials have the asserted testimony of R. T. Hendell, a taxicab driver, who is said to have identified Beitzel as the man whom he drove to the road alongside the canyon a week after the girl vanished.

After being given first aid treatment at the office of Dr. F. F. Rhoades, of Meeker, the injured persons were brought to their home here by Dale Rhoades, also of Meeker.

Crash Near Upper Sandusky
Five Detroit motorists suffered minor injuries when their car collided with a machine driven by Elmer Caruthers, of McCutcheonville. The accident occurred near Upper Sandusky about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The injured persons, who gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Woodson Ray and daughters Pauline and Ruth, and Miss Dorothy Maddox, all colored, were enroute from Detroit to Columbus, Ohio, leaving several broken fingers were the extent of the injuries. They were given medical aid at the office of an Upper Sandusky physician.

Arthur Wilson, of Mt. Gilred, was cut about the face when his car collided with a machine driven by Walter Danner, of Galien, near Iberia about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Samuel Stump, of Edison, who accompanied Wilson, and Danner escaped without injury. The Wilson car was turned over twice, breaking the top and windshield. A wheel was broken off the Danner car.

TEXAS DEMOCRATS FIGHT OVER SMITH

Name of Nominee Is Bombshell Splitting Party into Two Camps

Austin, Tex., Aug. 6.—The candidacy of Governor Alfred M. Smith, Democratic presidential nominee, today has split the Democracy of Texas into two bitter, warring camps. His name proved a bombshell in many of the county conventions held throughout the state last Saturday, producing stormy debates, fist fights, and separate meetings in some instances, with the promise that the issue would be fought out at the state Democratic convention to be held at Dallas, Sept. 14.

The conventions were for the purpose of naming delegates to the state convention, which will endorse the state nominee and write a state platform. Supporters of the national ticket, however, in many instances introduced resolutions endorsing the Smith-Robinson ticket with the result that the bitter fight over Smith flared up.

Out of the total number of traffic accidents in Great Britain last year, nearly one-sixth were due to pedal bicycles.

Large Congregation Hears Lee Street Church Pastor Give Union Service Sermon

Salem Church Filled for Weekly Program; Rev. J. W. Fisher Talks on Subject, "The Joy of Worship;" Special Music Contributed by Vocalists

Salem Evangelical church was filled to capacity for the union service last night, when the Rev. James M. Fisher, pastor of Lee Street Presbyterian church, preached on the theme, "The Joy of Worship."

Music for the service included four vocal solos sung by Miss Edna Koenig, of Salem church, and Guy Lambie, of Newton. The Rev. G. A. Kasper, Salem pastor, was assisted in conducting the service by the Rev. George E. Groves and the Rev. W. H. Howard.

Text from Psalms
The Rev. Mr. Fisher took as his text the words, "These things I remember, and pour out my soul within me, how I went with the throng, and led them to the house of God, with a voice of joy and praise, a multitude keeping holy day," from Psalms 42:1.

Mr. Fisher pictured the joy of worship in the past, the present and the future.

"The past has been a blessing unto the people of the world and Christ's gospel has been the leading light, His church the guiding star," Mr. Fisher said.

"The successful worship realized through the past experiences made for a joyous worship in the present age," he continued. "Our joy of worship in the future is also based on that of the past, the customs of the early centuries, the peace asked for and secured in that age and the joy of worship in the soul of each individual."

The sermon next Sunday night will be given by the Rev. E. Haldenburgh at Central Christian church.

BOMB WRECKS BARBER SHOP; DOES $5,000 DAMAGE

Chicago, Aug. 6.—A bomb was exploded today in front of a southside barber shop, wrecking the entrance to the building and shattering windows within a radius of 100 yards. Damage was estimated at $5,000. Police were puzzled over a motive for the blast in view of the fact that the shop is 100 per cent unoccupied.

Dorothy Mackall is now on the way to the highest attainment in cinema art. She has secured an interdictory decree of divorce from Lather Mendez, the Hollywood director.

Governor Al. Smith has "adjourned" politics during the heated season. It's no wonder that a man with a consideration for the public like that has made friends.

Charles A. Levine, Bert Acosta, and Mabel Boll have signed a contract for the purchase of a Junkers transatlantic airplane. Mabel must be set upon breaking her unchallenged record of starts.

Sam Houston, the Texas burro which became an acquisition of Governor Smith's zoo as the gift of admiring Lone Star state friends, is dead. But, then, the governor's friends say he isn't a bit superstitious!

Mayor Walker is back in New York after a trip through the Canadian Rockies and the states of the Great Northwest. The confidence Mayor Jimmie displays in New York's ability to get along without him is simply amazing!

Tom Hickey failed to annex the heavyweight championship, but he's taking back to New Zealand a pretty New York girl bride and time may show that he's the big winner of the recent match after all.

Representative Florentino L. La Guardia, of New York, protests against the "persecution" of New York night clubs by dry raiders. Manifestly it hasn't occurred to the New York congressman that the dry raiders couldn't get very far with their "persecution" if the night clubs weren't given to law-breaking.

Former Ambassador James W. Gerard, who was given the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath by King George, became irritated when addressed by a New York reporter as Sir James. James should not take the matter seriously. Few, if any, of us over here in America do.

The people of Croatia are said to be far more dissatisfied with their existing "independence" than they were when under subjection to Austria-Hungary. It's remarkable how often that "self-determination of peoples" business, of which we heard so much following the close of the war, has hopped up to threaten, if not disturb, the peace of Europe.

A New York wire tells us that names of Isidore and Kubala, the two Polish aviators who hopped off from Paris, last Thursday, for New York and have since been rescued, are pronounced Isidore-kov-skee with the accent on the "ov" and the "ah" being like the "z" in "asure," and Koo-ba-la, with the accent on the "bah," their plane's name, Marshal Pilsudski, being pronounced Mar-shah-wek, with the accent on the "shah" and Peow-sood-shee with the accent on the "ood." People with names like that should be prevented from attempting transatlantic flights in the present state of development of the airplane.

Fred Stone's Injuries.

Theatergoers throughout the land will sincerely hope that the expressed fear, that there is slight chance that Fred Stone ever will dance again, will prove to have been without foundation. As the associate of Dave Montgomery, while heading his own company and more recently in association with his charming daughter, Dorothy, he has endeared himself literally to hundreds of thousands of lovers of clean comedy. His name upon a show bill has ever been a guarantee of cleanliness, and it is pleasing to know that, through a period when many stage offerings veered closely toward the putrid, the public gave splendid support to Fred Stone, enabling him to accumulate a comfortable fortune—a splendid tribute to Stone, and unquestionable evidence that there is yet a large element of the playing public which has not lost its appreciation of cleanliness.

When his plane crashed over a flying field near New London, Connecticut, last Friday, both of Stone's legs were fractured and he suffered a broken thigh and a broken wrist. The surgeons in attendance express no fear for his recovery, though they do not pretend to say whether it will be a month or a year before he is upon his feet again, but they voice the fear that he has danced and done his acrobatic stunts for the last time.

Let us hope that they are mistaken in their fear. Let us hope that he will entirely recover from his injuries and resume his place upon the stage. It can little afford to lose a star whose name is synonymous with cleanliness and whose appearance is an assurance of high-class entertainment.

Chicago's Safety Assurance.

Assurance is given the world by an association organized up there for the dual purpose of combatting crime and redeeming the fair name of the city that people may visit Chicago without fear of being killed and remain under ordinary conditions of safety. In connection with its announcement it publishes a report of a survey made by an expert employed by it which shows that in 1926 and 1927 there were but two murders in the downtown district. One victim was a gangster and the other a newly-born babe.

"As advertised to the world, the citizens of Chicago going about their daily tasks and visitors coming to the city are actually in danger of being killed by gangsters' bullets," says the report of the expert, Arthur V. Lashly. "Nothing could be more absurdly untrue. In the last two years only two innocent bystanders were killed in this country and neither was killed by gangsters. When gangsters kill, they kill each other."

Murders in Chicago have been a never-failing source of news, jokes, movie plots and plays, all to the detriment of the city, the report says, and the bad name of Chicago has traveled around the world. Mr. Lashly undertakes to show that this is unjust. Bombs have been thrown there to intimidate, but no one was killed by a bomb, he states.

Mr. Lashly holds that a wrong impression has gone out regarding Chicago homicides; that no appreciation is given by outsiders to the fact that many of the homicides are cases of persons killed by automobiles and that the total is increased greatly by the killing of newly-born babes. He says that, in 1926, out of a total of 739 homicides there were but 242 persons shot to death out of a population of 3,000,000; in 1927 the figures were 235 shot to death out of a total of 699 homicides.

Twenty-four per cent. of the gun murders in 1927, and 30.6 per cent. in 1926, are classified as gang killings, and he says the gang killings decreased from seventy-four in 1926 to fifty-six in 1927.

It is very probable that Chicago has been greatly maligned in regard to her killings. Statistics show that her record of deaths by violence is far from the highest in the land; that there are many municipalities in which the killings, size of cities being considered, are far more numerous.

But Chicago's reputation as a crime center is not wholly the result of her homicide record. A number of investigations of crime conditions there have been made and the results have been given publicity. These investigations have brought out a connection between the criminal element and some of those holding places in the city government. It has been demonstrated that the city's courts and her police department have been made in many cases the footfalls of corrupt politicians—politics in which the gangsters, and the rum-runners, and the bootleggers, and the saloonists, and the many other criminal elements of the city exert a strong influence. And it is the reports of these conditions, which have been given wide publicity, which have gone far to give Chicago the reputation which is hers.

The good people of Chicago may go some distance in wiping out the stigma under which she suffers, but who can not hope to hold a high place in public esteem as a well and safely-governed city until she has undergone a thorough house-cleaning and freed herself of the many blot and blemishes which today mark her city government.

We sincerely hope that visitors within our gates and newcomers who have not yet experienced a full season of Marion's ideal summer weather will realize that last week's temperatures were, as they say out in California, decidedly unusual.

The Chicago Association for Criminal Justice issued a long statement in the Chicago papers, Sunday, to assure the public that Chicago must be visited in perfect safety, pointing out that but two people had been murdered in the downtown district in the two-year period of 1926 and 1927. By the perversity of fate and the make-up man, one of them carried along-side the story of the holding-up by a lone bandit of a big restaurant in the loop district.

Public officials, judges, politicians, professional and business men of high station and others held in high esteem were among the 450 patrons of three Cleveland clubs mopped up by federal dry raiders, Saturday afternoon. It's going to prove mighty difficult to enforce the Volstead law so long as those to whom its execution is committed as well as those who should work for its enforcement go out of their way to violate it.

A Washington wire, commenting on the ten per cent. increase in automobile fatalities in 1927 over the record of the preceding year, the figures being 23,497 against 21,431 in 1926, says that the 1927 toll represents "but one fatality for every 12,000 automobiles in use," which once more goes to show that figures will lie.

Eleven thousand British veterans of the Great war are on a pilgrimage to the scenes in Belgium where they began to fight fourteen years ago. Unless the Belgians have exercised exceptional diligence in marking the battlefields, those Britishers are going to have something of a time locating them. In fourteen years old Mother Nature, aided by the labors of man, can work a wonderful degree of restoration!

Since the adjournment of congress, last May, members of the lower house have dumped into the Washington post-office an average of five tons of campaign literature daily, and Washington post-office officials anticipate that they will be forced to handle sixty tons of such matter daily when the campaign reaches its height. With such an imposition practiced on the tax-payers, it's little wonder that the post-office department is unable to meet its expenses and has to call on the treasury department to pay its rentals.

Gustave Albert Lortzing.

BY COLETTE DOUGLASS.

Gustave Albert Lortzing was—and still is—one of the most popular of the German opera composers, that is, his operas have survived him and are still performed throughout Germany.

He was born in Berlin on October 23, 1801, of actor parents. When he was a child, he traveled with his parents, but when it was found that his family did not permit him to seriously pursue his musical studies. As a child he took children's roles on the stage and received the training which stood him in such good stead in his later years. As a player and also in composition, Lortzing was almost wholly self-taught.

In 1823 he married Regina Ahles, an actress and in 1824 brought out his first opera "All Pasha von Janina." In 1826 he joined the Court Theater at Detmold and in 1832 produced two valuable sketches which met with immediate success.

From 1832 to 1844 Lortzing was engaged as tenor singer by the Leipzig theater and while here he produced "Die Helden Schützen" which also proved immensely popular.

In the same year, Lortzing produced "Czar und Zimmermann," an opera which is still a favorite in Germany. This did not meet with great success in Leipzig, but when it was produced in Berlin was warmly received. It is said that on its production in Berlin it met with such a triumph of applause that it was immediately placed in the repertoire of most of the German theaters, and in addition has been translated into eight other languages, i. e., English, French, Danish, Swedish, Dutch, Bohemian, Hungarian and Russian.

Perhaps the finest of Lortzing's compositions is the opera "Der Wildschütz," which when produced in 1842 met with but moderate success. However, it later came to be recognized as one of his best works.

In 1844 Lortzing was promoted to the conductorship of the Leipzig theater, but was forced to resign within a comparatively short time owing to differences with the management. This reduced Lortzing and his family to poverty which was only meekly relieved by the successes of his various compositions. However, he still continued to compose, going from town to town and endeavoring to produce his operas. One of his operas produced during this time led to his engagement as kapellmeister at the Theater an der Wein, but during the revolution of 1848 the institution failed and Lortzing was again reduced to poverty. A brief appointment at Leipzig ending in a quarrel, Lortzing went to Berlin where he was appointed kapellmeister of the Friedrich Wilhelmstadtisches theater and spent the last years of his life conducting farces and trivial performances.

Lortzing was the possessor of a delightful humor and a never-ending flow of melody, which qualities make his operas as delightful now as they were when first produced.

On Lortzing's death, which occurred in Berlin on January 21, 1851, his family was left practically destitute. The sum of 15,000 thalers—about $11,000—was raised by the theater to help him in his last days. Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Comment.

HERE COMES AUGUST.

August, now upon us, has never inspired much poetry, but it is not without beauty and delightful associations. The cornfields are waving a welcome to the new month, which has inherited richly from July. There is promise of a good harvest in the green and gold of all outdoors. The picture can not be changed in a day by tearing a leaf of the calendar. Summer sweetness does not pass in a night.

When and if the year is ever divided into thirteen equal periods, as now advocated, the beauty of much that has been written of certain months will lose its identity. Perhaps the months themselves, under the proposed reform, would lose their names and become merely mathematical characters, as from one to thirteen.

Originally August had thirty days. You know the story. July, named in honor of Julius Caesar, had thirty-one. Roman senators borrowed a day to add to the month of Emperor Augustus. It would never do to give Caesar's successor an inferior month. Thus political sentiment can be held partially responsible for the mixup modern calendar reformers are trying to remedy.

But relabeling the months, taking from or adding to, can not change the march of the seasons. Neither can human mind rearrange the schedule of the sun. Upon nature's immutable residence we may base our faith in the Infinite; to the music of the stars we may still tune our songs of hope.—Toledo Blade.

Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips.—Proverbs 27:2.
"Prayer—May our lives be O God, enjoy Thy favor, and Thy praise be revealed in us."

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Transportation, communication and organization are three immense contributions that science has made to the world within the last century. It is loose thinking which leads anyone to believe that the mere addition of all sorts of conveniences and luxuries is of any lasting importance to man unless he has the cultivated sense to guide him in the use of his new tools. Science may turn the world into a marvelous toy shop in which bewildered man may lose his way and come to nothing.

One of the most eminent advertising authorities in America, speaking at the recent convention of the International Advertising association, said: "Newspapers, during the past five years, have emerged triumphantly—meeting all kinds of competition, including radio and other new forms of advertising—to a surer, softer, sounder place in the sun of public appreciation."

Newspapers need have no fear of radio or any other advertising medium. Everything that promotes advertising and increases the volume of it helps the newspaper. For it is inevitably realized that the daily newspaper is the logical medium for carrying mercantile messages into the homes of people of all ranks in life. It is simply a logical and common sense development, that has led producers of goods to use the newspaper more and more to get their preachments to the public.

Vincent Kerens, son of a rich St. Louis man who died some years ago, has finally come into about $2,000,000 worth of his father's estate. His father's will stipulated that the boy was to get nothing but a monthly allowance until "of his own free will and desire he has passed five consecutive years of sobriety and good behavior." The young man has proved to the satisfaction of a trust company that he has lived up to the terms.

Many young men would be willing to pass five years in sobriety and good behavior if they knew that by so doing they were coming into a fortune. And yet, thousands of young men are playing for the same stakes—and greater ones—only they don't look at it that way. They don't realize it. Day by day these young men are building reputations in their home towns. Bankers watch them. Merchants watch them. Professional men watch them. They are watched by the rank and file. Some day they will want credit at the bank or a high favor at the hands of the community. They will have earned it or they will have lost their best chance to earn it. They will have failed.

Reputation is the business world's most important collateral.

King of Siam a Dazzler.

BY TEMPLE MAXING.

I can think of few things that surpass in splendor the occasions when the King of Siam goes to worship at his temple. In the first place the temple itself, that of the Emerald Buddha, at Wat Phra Koo, Bangkok, is by far the most gorgeous and most imposing of all the temples, and it is guarded by huge stone giants or yaks.

Then the procession of the king is a remarkable one, and lastly, the king himself, who is indeed a wonderful sight to behold. Clad in a gown made of cloth of gold, he wears on his head the sacred pagoda hat which is nine stories high. He is carried from his palace to the long boat awaiting him in the river. This is a magnificent affair, rowed by many oarsmen. Under his largest golden umbrella he is propelled in state to the temple.

There he is met by the chief priest who, asking in a long, flowery prayer that the Lord Buddha should shower blessings on His Majesty, sprinkles holy perfume on him, while the lesser priests scatter lotus blossoms before him.

I am told that the King of Siam is one of the wealthiest of all the Eastern kings of monarchs. Certainly, this list which I shall quote, bears out this fact and makes it seem extremely likely. "He has twenty palaces, a herd of white elephants, $10,000,000 worth of diamonds, pearls, rubies and other precious stones, a principal royal barge with 120 oarsmen, 2,000 other royal barges, and twenty-four golden umbrellas." And, I am told, this isn't even the half of it.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

From Here and There.

More than fifty per cent. of the passengers on the Imperial Airways liners between Paris and London are women, and, as recently happened, all of the fourteen passengers on one trip were women.

On the reindeer ranches of Alaska and northern Canada, airplanes are being used as swift means for the cowboys to do the range. A herdman riding a plane recently completed in two hours work that in the ordinary way would have kept seven herdsmen employed for a week.

What's in a Clock Tick.

BY GARRETT F. SERVISS.

"A number of people are mystified by a phenomenon which is explained by you will be appreciated. In each of two adjoining rooms is a loud-ticking clock. While sitting in either room the clock ticks are heard constantly, except at regular intervals three or four ticks are missing.—H. H. McKrell, Bellevue, Pennsylvania."

This is an interesting case of wave interference. The intervals between the ticks of the clocks as they reach your ears from the different rooms are not exactly equal, i. e., the sound waves from the two clocks are not precisely in step when they fall upon the tympanum of your ear. There is, therefore, interference between them. This occurs in the following way: A sound wave consists of alternate compressions and rarefactions of the air. Beginning, then, at an instant when a compression from one tick precisely coincides with a compression produced by the other tick, there comes a maximum of pressure on the tympanum, so that the combined sound is at its loudest. But an instant later, because the two trains of waves are not in precise adjustment, the compression from the nearer clock will strike the ear slightly ahead of that from the other, and the sound will be a trifle fainter. The next instant the wave from the nearer clock is in phase so that the rarefaction of the following wave will infringe still further upon the compression of the leading one, and this will go on until the waves in the two trains are just half a vibration apart, when the maximum rarefaction of one will correspond with the maximum compression of the other, and the sound will be very much diminished, or even a tick or two destroyed. The phenomenon of alternate increase to maximum of the combined sound waves followed by decrease to minimum is called a "beat," and is well known in music. In tuning different instruments together the frequency of vibration of the sound waves emitted by one instrument is either increased or decreased until perfect correspondence is obtained with the waves from the other instrument. Until that is achieved beats will exist, but these disappear when the accord is struck.

The same phenomenon manifests itself in all kinds of waves. If light from two sources is so treated that the waves enter the eye in opposite phases, i. e., just half a wave length apart, they neutralize each other and darkness results. Where the interference is only partial, that is when the interfering waves are not in exactly opposite phases, there is only more or less dimming of the light. But if the two waves combine in the same phase there is a maximum of light.

A similar way water waves may swell to a maximum, or smooth one another out, according as they meet in or out of phase. In physics and astronomy the phenomena of wave interference are of immense importance, and very remarkable results are due to them. One of the most striking is the discovery, made a few years ago, that the interference light waves from the stars afford a means of measuring the diameters of huge stars whose distance is so great that even in the midnight scopes they appear only as dazzlingly brilliant points of light.—Copyright, 1928, by Premier Syndicate, Inc.

On Ductless Glands.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Everybody knows that the prominence of the front of the neck is called "Adam's Apple." I suppose this dates back to the time when the sinful act of the father of mankind resulted in his banishment from the garden of Eden. Perhaps the apple stuck in his throat and produced the prominence which has been given Adam's name since earliest days.

Closely associated with this prominence is the thyroid gland, the largest of the "ductless glands." We do not know exactly what the ductless glands are for, but they produce secretions which appear to have vital effects upon the body and its various organs.

The ideal condition is to have these glands function just enough to have each one supply the needed quantity of secretion. If they furnish too much there may be over-activity of the heart and over-stimulation of the nervous system. If they do not supply the needed quantity, the heart action may be lowered and the nervous system become sluggish.

More and more we are coming to believe that the ductless glands are very important organs. The way they operate has much to do with the well-being and happiness of the individual.

Some of these glands have an effect upon the actual growth and development of the body. We go to the circus to see the giant or to see the dwarf. Both are persons who have abnormal ductless glands. In one case there has been such stimulation of growth that a giant has been produced. In the other case there has been a failure of secretion. Because of the lack of the stimulating substance, the cells of the body have not developed as they should. Instead of having normal growth the person thus affected remained small and dwarfed.

It may well be that the lack of proper operation of the ductless glands makes for stupidity and dullness of intellect. On the contrary, an unusual supply of the secretion may produce stimulation of the brain and nervous system and unusual alertness of mind.

One of the mysteries of the scientific world is hidden in this field. When medical men succeed in discovering the exact purpose of the ductless glands and how to control their activities, there will be a greater mastery of life and its functions that has ever before been achieved.

It is an interesting thing that each generation makes progress in the understanding of the laws of nature. The ductless glands offer the most fruitful field for present day scientific investigation. Sufficient progress has been made to teach us that, by the use of certain serums and extracts made from glandular tissue and substances, some serious diseases may be controlled or benighted.

I desire to say about these gland preparations that they should not be employed without the advice of a physician. In some instances they produce violent reactions and are so powerful a way that it is necessary to use them with caution, and under skilled direction.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

Miss L. Q.—What causes beads of perspiration on the eyelids and eyebrows? This condition is present in any kind of fever.

A.—This is probably due to nervous condition—build up the general health so that the nervous system will benefit. Excessive perspiration is due to nerve stimulation.

K. K. Q.—How often should a person wash the hair?

A.—I have been advised to avoid all sweets—would a little ice-cream or orange ice be harmful? A.—About once every two weeks or ten days should be sufficient, unless the scalp is unusually oily.

A.—Follow your doctor's instructions. He is familiar with your condition and would therefore be the one to advise you.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MYSTRE.

New York, Aug. 6.—Diary of a motormen Peppy: Up for a whopping breakfast, with William MacLurg, of calf brains in brown sauce and a heaping dish of applesauce, and discussed among others Edwina Balmer, his brother-in-law and collaborator, who has become a magazine editor and likes the work. To a park with my wags and ventured to stand in the doorway of a police motorcycle garage near the Sixty-Sixth street entrance to look at the rows upon rows of machines. And a uniformed gentleman brusquely ordered me away, and I gave him a piece of my mind, of which I have little to spare.

Nor can I see why a uniform gives people the idea they may run the universe. So home, thinking up things I might have said. Worked awhile and in the evening to the St. Regis roof where the crowd was not so thick, but not so good to my mood. So to bed.

The "hoodoo" superstition is a fixation with many theatrical builders. There are several theaters on the Rialto which had every reason to be successes but are not, and the promoters are firm in their conviction they are "hoodooed." The most conspicuous example of this witch burning abracadabra was the Century, which for years wallowed in ups and downs. In the case of the most beautifully appointed in the city, and while it has had brief moments of success, it has cost many sponsoring attractions there tidy sums.

A gentleman from a midwest city whose name is Jacob Lord has a swell method of commanding unusual attention in New York hotels. He registers as Lord, Jacob. The comma is almost invisible to the naked eye, but immediately the hotel staff is in a flutter. Special dishes are prepared and the entire personnel is all attention at his approach.

The pest hotel employees hate is the finger snapper. When he wants anything he snaps his fingers. It is effective, but their love for him is never anything more than platonic.

Apartment houses often change character almost over night. There is one in the Fifties where a writer lived. It was for years one of those sedate places with polite attendants and lights out by midnight. Then one evening he came home and found two cook-eyed chorus girls having a good "home and mother" cry in the hall. The next morning there was a raid on a speakeasy apartment adjoining, and two days later some Chicago boys engaged in a pit of battle on the floor below. In a week a respectable apartment had become a dump.

The minister apartment house is reflected by its hall boy, usually a sullen and suspicious person who is often in league with criminals. The police have a long list of ex-convicts who seek such spots.

There is a lady, incidentally, who specializes in naming new apartment houses. She eliminates possibility of repetition, having a complete list of every building name in town. She is responsible for the la-de-da idea of calling buildings merely by street numbers. Her charge is $50 a name.

Fifty-Seventh street has become New York's rue du Paix. Since the thoroughfare was widened it ripples with smart perfumes, jewelry and other glittering specialty shops, aside from its magnificent dressmaking establishments. Its doors are adorned by the handsomest of uniformed flunkies, and curbs are lined with the finest motor cars. It is desolated until the shopping begins at 10 o'clock, but from then on until 8 in the evening it is one of New York's liveliest shopping centers.

"All," zips a telegram from Phoenix, Arizona, signed No Signature, "New York columnists are dubs and I send my contempt, pity, venom and worst wishes. Is there anything else I can send you?"

When your Children Cry
for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved, or diarrhea checked. A vegetable product, a baby remedy sought for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use. It is always ready, always safe to use. Any hour of the day or night that baby becomes fretful, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every drugstore has it.

JOHN D. THIRD GETS NATIONS LEAGUE JOB

Geneva—John D. Rockefeller III, grandson of the famous millionaire, has gone to work. If he does not work, he does not eat, goes the parental dictum. So he obtained a job in the information section of the League of Nations, starting at one hundred dollars per week. Chances for advancement are said to be excellent.

Young Rockefeller's father, John D. Jr., told his son that not one dime of the parental fortune will be available for "third" until he has proven himself capable of working for his own living.

The League was chosen as the Rockefeller family has repeatedly shown its interest in that organization by large donations. Only recently they gave two millions dollars for a League Library, and the Foundation appropriated $200,000 to the League Health Committee.

Meditations
OF A Married Woman

BY HELEN NOWLAND

Real love is like a live wire; once it touches you, ever so lightly, you are powerless to LET go.

When you put your heart into your work, your head will soon follow—and that's what the world calls "genius."

Every man should let a woman select his stenographer for him. Then he'd be sure of getting somebody who wouldn't take his mind off his business.

Most of the heepped husbands, unlike (see in the comic magazines), are the big "Canardiers," married to fuzzy little tug-boats who tow them wherever they like.

It will always be easy for a woman to win in a discussion with a man, as long as his strongest argument is to rush out and slam the front door.

It used to be three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves; but at the present rate of speed, it looks as though it would be just about one generation from a Rolls Royce to a second hand diver.

The kind of love that would fly out of the window when poverty comes in at the door is so small that it could easily have crept out through the key-hole.

"America had to have a Prince of Wales," remarks a cynical Englishman, "so they elected Lindbergh." Fifteen! If an Ace is higher than a King, how much higher is an Ace than a mere prince?

A woman likes to be trusted with another woman's husband, but somehow, she resents being considered "perfectly safe."

What a man enjoys most about a midnight rarebit or a lobster Newburgh is the thrilling thought that it isn't good for him.

The Constant Flame

A ROMANCE OF GRIPPING HUMAN INTEREST.

BY WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

On the day before he left Lyall, Emily did not see Kent.

She left the shop late one afternoon, and a little discouraged. Frances Hadden had not been able, as yet, to satisfy herself on the scheme of decoration for the new commission and her mind was beginning to wander.

She even such fascinating things as she may be turned into hard work.

She wandered up the River road, feeling a great deal in the monotony of green on every side. And it was as she waited to cross the street—as she waited, curiously enough, under a spreading elm—that a motor load of gay young folk, hatless and laughing, glided by.

Marion Grainger and another girl Emily didn't know were in the back seat. He sat between them—the Kent of her recollections, the boy of a thousand and one dreams.

Emily as she remembered him, he was not so very blue, full-cut, merry eyes, but he had been in the old days. There was about him a hint of sternness, he appeared more than six years older somehow.

It seemed for a second their eyes must meet and she held her breath. Almost she thought him about to speak. But she swept on and he had not seen her. She stood there rapt with excitement, a furious knocking in her throat. Then the car disappeared down the street and a creamy sadness possessed her. She went on up the hill feeling that her spirit waited in a great stillness—waited for a strain of half-remembered music.

The next day the society column reported that Kent had gone and a little torment of loneliness gnawed at her heart. Even though she might never see him, to think of Kent down there at Highcliffe, perhaps walking in the garden, under the roses of the pergola was one thing; to vision him faring forth beyond the horizon line, lost in the immensity of an unknown world was quite another and one that shook her.

Life went suddenly staid and colorless; in a driving panic she turned to Kingdom Cole.

He had invited her into the city to dine some evening and attend the theatre.

"Not very interesting, now," he said. "Shows all closing for the summer. Still the drama association is trying out a new piece. You might think it amusing."

"Anything would interest me, King. You wouldn't believe—would you?—that I've never been to the theatre excepting for a matinee? Living almost in New York, really, and not a glimpse of the Gay White Way when it's gay and white. Spouse you won't believe that."

"Yes," he said. "Why not? Frances told me a little."

That puzzled her, rather. She didn't know, of course, about the tradition of wealth and old-fashioned families nor accepted as fact by Cole and the others. Frances never had hinted to Emily that she was sailing under false colors through no fault of her own. And if ever it occurred to Cole to wonder why he failed to be invited to the home of this girl the tradition answered all questions.

He saw her at their friend's house because her family would hold to medieval customs in matters of courtship and marriage. A suitor first would present himself to her parents and after satisfying them would be permitted to call upon her occasionally, sedately and, of course, under proper chaperonage.

Time enough for this. No matter how much in love a man might be there was no need of rushing things. He didn't blame her for wanting to get out of such a morose atmosphere.

Once or twice he had seen the gray eyes light and the sweet face flush suddenly; he had felt a little—a singing rhythm—about her. And he suspected that he hadn't touched even the surface of her real feeling. Depths there and heights—vital, exultant heights. But that would come.

Kingdom Cole never underestimated himself.

He waited for her at the ferry one evening and took her to the room—of the Van Hux for dinner.

Lights all abated and soft; the gleam of silver, the hard, white abuse of napery. Cole, so very blond, so tall and handsome, suddenly became a Viking.

Color—color—oh, everywhere. In rich gowns of women, flame and vivid blue running along white shoulders; floating in fairy streamers of chiffon and tulle.

Color in the music; the orchestra played simple things that night, songs Emily could understand. The lullaby from "Jocelyn," the Kashmiri song.

Color out in the street where a million wheels seemed to blaze; color in the very roar of traffic.

"I didn't know anything could be so wonderful, King. It makes you feel all sparkle some way."

"And you make me feel so, Emily. Does that please you? That I care so much?"

"Why, of course, King. Oh, look—the woman in ermine—exquisite!"

He gave it up. She was like a child with a new toy; he could wait to make love to her.

Everyone at the theater seemed to know him. The man behind the window called him "Old King Cole," peering at her over his shoulder, and offered him a box which he declined with a fine air of hauteur. It impressed Emily greatly.

Their seats were down in front and for the first few minutes he kept bowing right and left, sometimes smiling in a weary way.

"So popular," she thought. "Why, they all seem to feel honored when he notices them. How important he must be—a power here."

And the glamour of the evening settled upon him in her mind; all the color, the music, the lights became a part of him and dazzled her. For the first time since she had known Kent Rosier his image grew dim.

The play perplexed Emily. Like the book by George Bernard Shaw she had tried to read, it seemed to be full of things she couldn't understand. Still everyone else seemed amused—everyone but King who kept muttering, "Stale—oh, rotten!"

And when he asked her, about the middle of the last act, if she'd had enough, she was quite ready to leave.

Still she felt a twinge of pity for a young fellow who stepped up in the lights and said anxiously, "Hope you liked it, Cole."

King shrugged dramatically, put out his hands, and the young fellow kept step with them to the door, arguing in a tense, excited voice.

"It's a great idea, Cole. Rough in spots, maybe, but we'll take care of that. Have a heart, will you? All we want is half a chance."

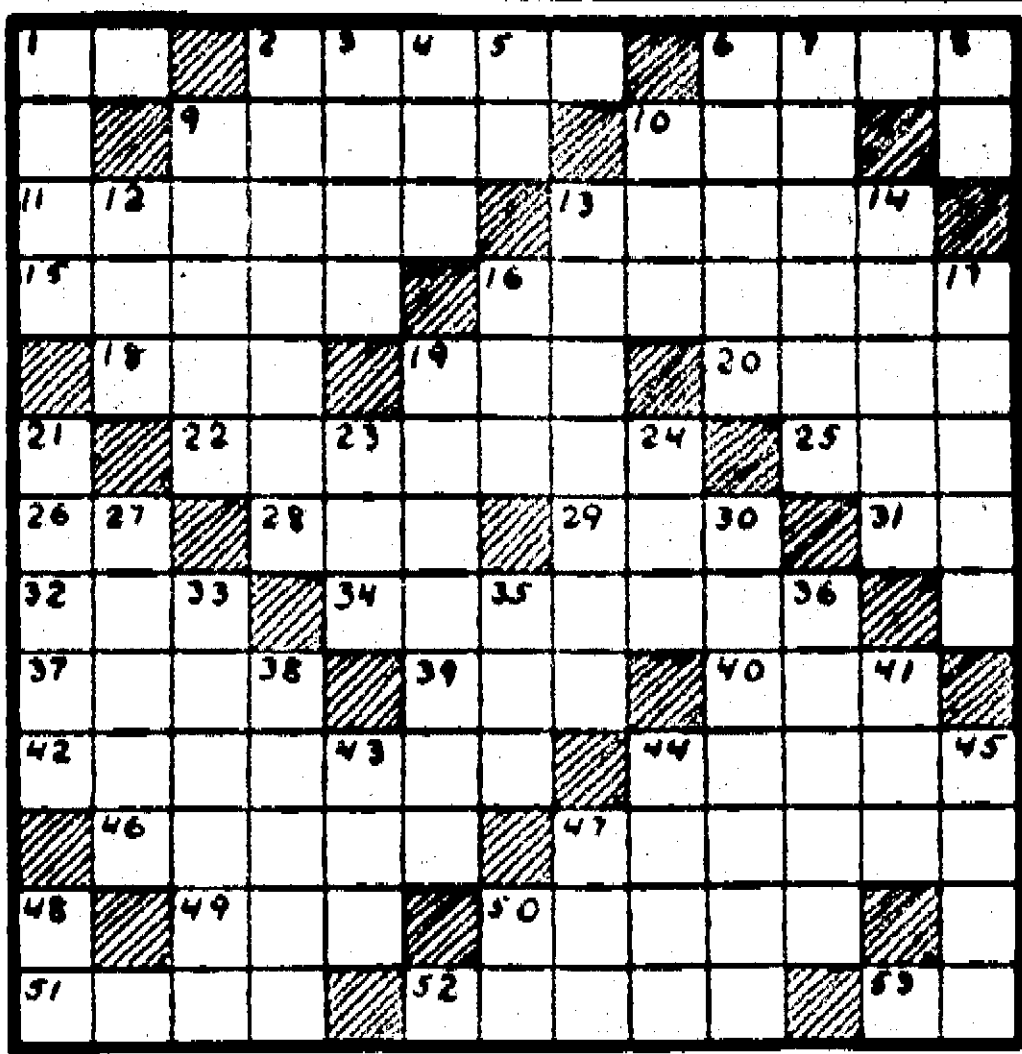

"You'll get all that's coming and you know it."

"But Cole—"

"Good-night."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JIM MORTIMER LEWIS

YESTERDAY was Sunday, and on Sunday it is wicked to play but all right to milk cows and take them to the pasture.

It was another of those warm mornings when I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth, and it made me wish that I had the upstairs front room on a houseboat, and then when I got up in the morning I would dive out of my window and under the boat and come up by the back steps and go in to breakfast.

My ant washed me as usual, only harder, and then my mother said to come back from the pasture before I went to Sunday school, because she wanted to give me something to take to my teacher. So we all came back and she said she would send my teacher a bouquet.

My mother and my ant was out in the front yard stooping over side by side to pick some forget-me-nots to go with the roses they had already picked and they were warm and red in the face from bending over, and Annabelle Lee was playing around the front yard and we kids were waiting. And Annabelle Lee, before anyone could stop her, bent her neck and batted my ant on the high end of herself like a Billie goat, and my ant went down in the flower garden with her hands full of dirt.

My mother said: "Why the law, Nancey, how come you to do that?" And Just then Annabelle Lee batted my mother and my mother dove a nose-dive by the side of my ant, and then they jumped up and looked around the bunch was a long way off and only Annabelle Lee was near them, and my mother hollered at me and asked me what had happened. When I told her she said we could go along without the bouquet, and in the meantime she would consider what had better be done to Annabelle Lee, and then her and my ant looked at each other and began to laugh. I know what would of happened to me if I had done it.

Today was Monday, and my mother says these are dog days, and for me to not go in the water in the sunshine, because the sun is too strong and I might get struck. The dog days is when if a flea goes in swimming in the sun he gets dog bladders all over himself, and they hurt when they bust. My mother says they are nothing, but southern blisters, but my mother is only a woman and there are a lot of things she don't know. If they aren't dog bladders why don't we get them except in the dog days? If my mother had went in swimming a lot when she was little she would be a southerner woman.

We played ball almost all day till Banty who is our catcher tried to pick one from in front of the bat and the bat hit his nose and just about split it. I went home with him when it stopped bleeding, and he was off sight by the time and came back with me.

Love's Awakening

THE HEART STORY OF A WOMAN'S AFFECTIONS

By ADRIAN GARRISON

Love's Awakening

Love's Awakening

MARY'S shrewd deduction that I instead of Dicky was responsible for the money he just had given her to spend on clothes, jolted the complacency which my husband's handling of the delicate situation had given me. It the girl's keen mind were to travel further along that line, she might realize that I had noticed the depleted condition of her wardrobe. This conclusion I distinctly didn't wish her to reach, especially before I had the opportunity to restore her bank book and check book without her knowing that I ever had had them in my possession.

"You're wrong, Mary," I said promptly. "It was not I, who first thought it would be nice for you to have some shopping money today. I am ashamed that it wasn't my idea, but I can't claim the credit for it. If you thank your uncle Dicky, you'll have done your whole duty."

I quitted my badly frayed conscience with the reminder that my little speech was essentially truthful, although I had omitted to name Marion as the one who first had discovered the scantiness of Mary's sartorial equipment. That the evasion had been successful I realized when Mary put her finger tips to her lips and blew a kiss after Dicky's retreating back.

"My apologies to you, oh! best of angels!" she said, and with the feeling of another outpost safely skirted, I rejoined with her the group waiting for us. Lillian's eyes were upon the waiting room clock and I saw that many precious minutes of our shopping trip already had been consumed.

"We must start at once," I said hastily, and Lillian nodded a quick acquiescence.

"I'll get you a taxi," Harry Underwood volunteered, but his wife put in a quick disclaimer.

"You don't know the New York of this day, Harry," she said. "Taking a taxi in this district is just about 30 degrees slower than following a beam. We'll take the subway up to Fifth Street and then get a taxi from there to the shop we want."

"It's too hot for subways," Dicky declared, "and if you'll be guided by me you'll lose only about three minutes of time. Go out the Thirty-third Street entrance and take a taxi west instead of east. Have the driver go up Ninth Avenue under the elevated."

"Thanks for the tip," Lillian said. "I've tried that route and it's all right when the current's full. But if the traffic is too hot, everything will spoil, so it's all the same to you, we'll take the subway. So long! Meet you in the hotel lobby at twelve-thirty."

She grasped Marion's arm and turned her in the direction of the subway entrance. Mary and I turned with them, catching the frolicful look which Dicky sent after Lillian. I knew that her abrupt refusal to follow his advice only amused him while he would have been fiercely resentful of a similar snub from me. However, I reflected, Lillian's husband might not have smiled so mirthfully if he had given the counsel she had treated so cavalierly. Why was it, I asked myself, that the average man appeared to feel that any woman related to him was offering him a mortal insult if she refused to follow his proffered advice upon the most trivial topics?

"Sorry to insult your spouse, my dear," Lillian laughed when we had gained seats in the subway. "But we can't afford to waste a minute's time."

"I fancy he'll not brood over it long," I retorted, "and if we're delayed any longer, Marion's sanity as well as Mary's will be in danger. Just look at them!"
